

GRIZZLED GRADUATES OF OGLETHORPE PRAISE NEW SCHOOL

Message From President Wilson and Presence of Members of First Alumni Features of Cornerstone Laying

DR. JAS. VANCE MAKES THE PRINCIPAL ADDRESS

Opening Exercises at North Avenue Presbyterian Church Concluded With Interesting Services on Varsity Campus

The exercises in connection with the laying of the cornerstone of Oglethorpe university were held Thursday morning at the North Avenue Presbyterian church on Peachtree street in the presence of the faculty and the visiting members of the church and crowded the aisles.

Eight white-haired men, alumni of old Oglethorpe university, who were delegates to the laying of the cornerstone, which the present university is a resurrection of the old one, were the most impressive of the great occasion.

Dr. J. S. Vance, president of the university, made the principal address, and the exercises were concluded with interesting services on the Varsity campus.

The exercises began at 10 o'clock. The directors of the university, the speakers on the program and various other persons who came as honor guests entered the church wearing caps and gowns.

The exercises were sung with the audience standing. An invocation was said by Dr. R. A. Brown, pastor of the church. The exercises were then conducted by Dr. J. S. Vance, president of the university.

The first speaker, Dr. W. J. Martin, president of Davidson college and moderator of the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church, was introduced by Dr. J. S. Vance.

Dr. Martin expressed his great interest in the new university and his confidence in its future. He praised the efforts of the trustees and the faculty in carrying on the movement to rebuild the old Oglethorpe.

After Dr. Martin's address came the roll call of the living alumni of old Oglethorpe. Major J. O. Venable, a distinguished citizen of Valdosta, Ga., who was one of the founders of the new university, was called.

Major Venable, who was one of the founders of the new university, was called. He was followed by Major Venable, who was one of the founders of the new university.

The audience was then silent and under the spell of a deep feeling as one after another of these old gentlemen answered "present" and spoke of his youth and his college days at old Oglethorpe in the long ago.

RECALL OLD DAYS.
Recalling his memories of the old university, Major Venable said he remembered Sidney Lanier, the south's greatest poet, when Lanier was a student and a boy in his teens. He said he could not recall any of the great men of the old university who were seniors when he was a freshman.

Dr. J. S. Vance occupied a seat on the outside of the front row.

RESERVE BOARD ORDERS ANOTHER CUT

Efforts of Senators Hoke Smith and Hardwick to Improve Conditions Throughout South Are Rewarded

60 AND 90 DAY PAPER AT 4 AND 4 1-2 CENTS

Reduction Which Will Go Into Effect Immediately Will Bring Needed Relief to All Cotton States

WASHINGTON, C. Jan. 21.—The federal reserve board last night authorized a reduction in the discount rate on commercial paper to the following basis: Maturities up to sixty days, 4 per cent; maturities of sixty days and over, 4 1/2 per cent.

The reduction will become effective at once as soon as the directors of the reserve banks at Atlanta and elsewhere avail themselves of the authority thus conferred.

The reduction was authorized by the board following a prolonged conference of its members. Senator Hoke Smith spent some time with them tonight in discussing the reduction and picturing to the board the relief that such a move would bring to the cotton states.

The authorization of the reduction marks the end of a long battle which terminated last night by Mr. Smith and his colleagues, Senator Hardwick, for a further reduction in the discount rate.

While the previous reductions tended to relieve the southern situation somewhat, Mr. Smith and others believed that the rate low enough to give the full measure of relief which the situation demanded and which the banking act was capable of rendering. So they kept hammering at the board until last night the reduction was authorized.

It is the belief in Washington among persons familiar with the provisions of the banking act and business conditions in the south, that the final reduction will prove a great boost to the prosperity of the south, particularly, and enable the member banks of the federal reserve system to extend their loans to merchants, farmers and industrial concerns.

Atlanta Reserve Bank Welcomes New Rates

R. T. Pike, cashier of the federal reserve bank in Atlanta, discussing the reduction in the discount rate, said to The Journal Thursday:

"This is a very substantial reduction in the discount rate and the member banks certainly ought to take advantage of it. It will enable them to extend their loans to merchants, farmers and industrial concerns, and it will also enable them to extend their loans to the cotton states."

Believe the new rates will be the signal for the banks to make still further use of the accommodations and facilities which they have made available to the cotton states, since they will not only be enabled to make loans to the cotton states, but also will be enabled to make loans to the cotton states.

"While the reserve bank has no control over the interest rates charged by member banks to their customers, it is reasonable to suppose that the member banks will take advantage of the full benefit of the reduction in the reserve bank's discount rate."

German Press Gloats Over Airship Raid on Towns of England

BERLIN, via Amsterdam and London, Jan. 21.—The isolation of the British islands is conquered successfully, says the Morgenpost, which reports the German air raid on England.

"Of what use to Great Britain," it adds, "are the surrounding seas and the English Channel, when the German air force is able to drop bombs on the towns of England?"

The Tageszeitung expresses satisfaction over the raid, and hopes it will be followed by others, while the Berliner says the German air force is now in a position to strike at will.

North sea is no hindrance to German airships.

BLAMES THE BRITISH FOR PROLONGING THE WAR

New York Delegate Tells Foreign Trade Convention at Meeting in St. Louis Britain's Policy Is Unjust

CONSIDERING PROBLEMS OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

Secretary Redfield and John Bassett Moore, Former Counselor of State Department, Among Number of Speakers

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 21.—Several hundred delegates, representing leading commercial organizations of the United States, attended the first session of the second national foreign trade convention here today. After speeches of welcome were heard an address was delivered by Secretary Redfield.

Permanent organization was effected, then the convention began considering problems of international law as they affect American commerce in the war. The principal address was made by John Bassett Moore, former counselor of the state department.

At the afternoon session government regulation of commerce as it affects foreign trade were to be considered. Among those who discussed points raised in Mr. Moore's address was C. F. Randolph, of New York.

"All things considered," he said, "we may hold the British government responsible for the far-reaching and severe restraint on international trade. At home it imposes most searching prohibitions in trade with the enemy. As sea it holds up whatever neutral nations choose to call contraband and chooses to suspect of ultimate enemy."

"Considering British policy, I am by no means persuaded that it will have the effect of forcing a declaration of war in the war. We understand that if the allies can only hold out long enough, they will be able to bring the war to a successful conclusion. We understand that if the allies can only hold out long enough, they will be able to bring the war to a successful conclusion."

"The British government is not only imposing prohibitions on international trade, but it is also imposing prohibitions on the export of goods to the enemy. This is a most serious situation for the United States, which is a neutral nation."

REDFIELD REVIEWS WORK.
"The department," he continued, "now has in mind the development of foreign and domestic commerce all over the country in the thought that in time the commerce will be able to maintain its position in the world and keep in constant touch with it."

Girl Fleeing From Convent Dressed as Man Startles Guard

LONDON, Jan. 21.—"Don't shoot, I'm Irish," served as a password to safety for a young woman fleeing from a convent in a recent war. When the fighting was raging there a few days ago, an account of the incident reached London in a soldier's letter.

"One night after we had moved towards Ypres we heard a light footfall close to our outpost. A woman in a man's dress was running towards us. She was very young and very beautiful. She was running towards us. She was very young and very beautiful."

MERCHANTS IN HORSE CHARTER AND FARE

Retail Association, at Annual Meeting, Favors Letting the People Pass on Proposal for New Form of Government

The Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, organized four months ago, held its first annual meeting at the Capital City club Wednesday evening and showed by the genuine Atlanta spirit which pervaded the occasion and by the strong grasp with which it took hold of several important questions that it is destined to become a powerful factor in the rebuilding and progress of the community.

After electing officers for the ensuing year and hearing the report of work done by the board of directors, the association was re-elected. The association endorsed the proposed southern fair at Lakewood fair project and pledged its support in building and making the fair a success, and endorsed Mayor James G. Woodard's proposal of two committees to draw two new laws and submit the same to the voters for their choice.

The meeting was largely attended and was characterized by wonderfully good spirit. That old-fashioned, go-forward spirit which has been the main spring of every great successful movement in Atlanta was in evidence in every speech and was echoed by every round of applause.

First vice president—W. W. Orr, of Morris Music Clothing company. Second vice president—H. A. Maier, of Maier & Berke Co. Secretary—Honorable McGeehan, Mr. Orr, on invitation of Mr. Paxton, thanked the association in behalf of all the officers of the honor conferred upon them and promised to render every assistance within their power in developing and strengthening the organization.

Mr. Paxton, in his short speech of acceptance, read some very interesting figures bearing upon the resources represented by the association.

Its membership to date, he said, comprises ninety retail firms of Atlanta, and this membership comprises something like 500 individuals, since a number of firms have several men on the association's membership roll.

The net capital of these ninety firms is $3,486,000. The approximate business done in 1914 amounted to $13,296,000. The report also showed that the city of Atlanta paid $147,715 in 1914, and the state paid $15,188. The report also showed that the city of Atlanta paid $147,715 in 1914, and the state paid $15,188.

REPORT OF DIRECTORS. Werner S. Byck, chairman of the board of directors of the association, read a report of the work done by the directors since the association was organized. The report showed that the directors in these four months have held twenty-eight meetings and have dealt with the following important matters:

The directors visited the state fair at Macon and as the result of what they witnessed on that trip determined that the retail merchants of Atlanta should support the Lakewood fair project.

Steps have been taken to discourage the use of trading stamps and premium coupons in the sale of merchandise.

Steps have been taken for strict regulation by the city authorities of "fly-by-night" merchants who come into the city without payment of any tax and only a small license and raid the legitimate field of the local merchants.

A "Buy-in-Atlanta" campaign has been started and already has produced good results.

Steps have been taken to suppress dishonest and misleading advertisements of so-called bankrupt sales and other similar schemes, and to this end an ordinance has been introduced in the city council.

An ordinance has been introduced in the city council regulating circus parades, so as to keep these parades off Whitehall and Peachtree streets, where they cause a congestion for one-half a day and greatly demoralize business.

Steps have been taken to bring about more equitable basic business between tenants and landlords in the retail business district.

Steps have been taken looking to a change from Central to Eastern time, so as to give an hour more of daylight.

A collection letter has been formulated and already proved very effective. Steps have been taken looking to exchange tickets to bring people to Atlanta.

Mr. Byck and the directors were given a vote of thanks for this splendid showing and the constitution of the association was amended to provide for the appointment of twenty-one directors instead of limiting the board to twelve, as the constitution originally provided.

These matters of a business nature being finished, the speeches of the evening commenced. The first speaker was Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin, of the supreme court of Georgia.

Introducing his remarks with the statement that, "if casting the fly or my discourse upon your intellectual current I get a strike or two, I shall be entirely satisfied with my oratorical efforts," the distinguished jurist delivered one of his characteristically delivered after-dinner speeches abounding in wit, anecdote and rich philosophy to wisdom.

The next speaker was Meli R. Wilkison, president of the Atlanta chamber of commerce. He was received with an ovation, and an interesting presentation of the Lakewood fair project followed by an appeal for the association's support in making the fair a success, resulted in the unanimous and enthusiastic adoption of a resolution putting the association squarely on record as backing the project from this time forth.

In this connection there was read the meeting a letter from Beaumont Davison, president of Davison-Paxton-Stokes and chairman of the general fair committee, regretting his absence from the meeting and outlining with splendid constructive vision the details of the fair project.

He said there is no reason why this fair exploiting the resources of the great southeast, of which Atlanta is the center, should not rival the magnificent permanent fairs of Toronto, Detroit, Dallas, Los Angeles and other cities of the country, and he expressed the opinion that proper efforts would be made for the fair a huge government fish hatchery, the government's aviation experiments, the most Olympic games, a series of exhibition games between the world's series baseball teams each year, and a golf course which will bring to Atlanta the championship tournaments of the world.

Mayor James G. Woodard spoke next, and his speech was entirely devoted to the city government. He declared the time has come when either the city government must be reorganized or its revenue increased. He said he did not favor an increase in the tax rate for the present purpose, but every effort has been made to cut expenses wherever possible, and he declared this can only be done by getting the city government on a businesslike basis. He said to bring about a reorganization of city affairs, it is absolutely necessary that the city charter which fixes responsibility. The mayor then told the meeting of his proposal to have two committees to draw two new charters, one being a straight commission charter and the other being an up-to-date and harmonious representative government charter, and he asked the support of the association in putting a resolution creating such committees through the general council.

In response to the mayor's appeal the meeting passed a resolution endorsing his views and requesting the general council to create two charter committees and submit the two charters, no drawn, to the people for their choice.

The other speakers of the evening were James J. Mayon, city attorney of Atlanta, who joined heartily and eloquently in the forward spirit of the occasion; Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution, who declared it is the duty of the business men of Atlanta to take a more active part in the affairs of the city government; Jack J. Letton, president of the Atlanta Hotel Men's association, who predicted great things for the merchants' association, strongly endorsed the Lakewood fair, and promised the co-operation of the hotel men with the merchants in every movement for the rebuilding of Atlanta.

Indiana Society Dinner. Members of the Indiana society of Atlanta will enjoy a dinner dance at the Ansley hotel next Tuesday evening. A feature of the affair will be a cabaret entertainment. "CASCARETS" FOR THE LIVER AND BOWELS. No more Headache, Bad Colds, sour stomach and constipation.

Get a 10-cent box now. Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—merely forcing a passage—every day with pills or cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, indigestible and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascarets night will straighten you up by morning. It works while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too. CASE OF FREDERICK TENDER IS POSTPONED

Hearing Continued to Monday on Account of Morris Brandon's Absence

Morris Brandon, of the firm of Rosen, Brandon, Slater & Phillips, attorneys for Leo M. Frank, will be the chief witness Monday at the trial of Dr. J. H. Lehon, C. C. Tedder and Arthur Thurman, indicted for alleged subornation of perjury.

At the request of Arthur Powell, one of the attorneys for the three defendants, the case was postponed Thursday by Judge Hill until Monday at noon.

The defendants were in court; Jim Conley, held for the past two days at the Pulton tower, was locked in the prison cell in the basement, waiting to be called as a witness; Rev. C. B. Ragdale and R. L. Barber were present as witnesses, and many other witnesses were waiting to testify.

The case was postponed because of the absence of Attorney Morris Brandon, who is expected to return Monday afternoon. The testimony of Mr. Brandon will be of the greatest importance to the defense. Mr. Brandon will testify that he drew up the affidavit of R. L. Barber, in which Barber stated C. B. Ragdale had killed Mary Phagan.

Barber and Ragdale, it will be remembered, were indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan. It will be remembered that Ragdale said this affidavit was not accepted at the door. The southern representative of the Bureau of Investigation, C. C. Tedder and Arthur Thurman were then indicted for subornation of perjury, it being charged that they, knowing Ragdale and Barber were lying, procured the affidavits nevertheless.

Morris Brandon's testimony will be that he is understood, that he, as an attorney for Leo M. Frank, questioned Barber and Ragdale and then drew up the affidavits for them, there being no reason to doubt why they would do this. Mr. Brandon will also testify, it is understood, that neither Tedder nor Thurman nor Lehon were instrumental in drawing up these affidavits, as far as he is concerned.

Jim Conley, it is understood, will be called by the state as a witness to deny that he ever saw the confession of Ragdale in the affidavits.

Judge Powell also announced in court that he was preparing to file a demurrer to the specification of offenses in the indictment drawn up by Solicitor Dorsey. The demurrer was drawn up by J. H. Lehon, C. C. Tedder, Lehon and Thurman. This indictment, drawn up by Solicitor Dorsey, were lying, procured the affidavits nevertheless.

Other indictments had been drawn up against the defendants. A demurrer was filed by Judge Powell against these former indictments, which were later withdrawn and the new one made. The new indictment, Judge Powell will file the new indictment Monday morning.

It does not set up a crime against the defendants.

Morris Brandon said he was determined that the cases against Tedder, Thurman and Lehon should be tried and disposed of, unless some legal excuse was offered for postponement, and set Monday for the hearing.

These cases have been set for trial many times, but have been postponed each time.

next, and his speech was entirely devoted to the city government. He declared the time has come when either the city government must be reorganized or its revenue increased. He said he did not favor an increase in the tax rate for the present purpose, but every effort has been made to cut expenses wherever possible, and he declared this can only be done by getting the city government on a businesslike basis.

He said to bring about a reorganization of city affairs, it is absolutely necessary that the city charter which fixes responsibility. The mayor then told the meeting of his proposal to have two committees to draw two new charters, one being a straight commission charter and the other being an up-to-date and harmonious representative government charter, and he asked the support of the association in putting a resolution creating such committees through the general council.

SHRINERS WILL GIVE AN ALL-NEW PICTURE SHOW

Sunday's Pictures Will Flash by But Once and Never Be Seen Again

Reviving the spirit that made the Shrine's gathering here last May one of the big things in Atlanta's record, the local nobles of Yassar temple are planning a series of stunts to put Atlanta on the map again this summer at the Seattle imperial council meeting in July.

The first crack out of the box will be the moving picture performance Sunday at this Grand.

"Other things are coming later," said Noble Henry Heins, one of the Yassar committee, Thursday morning. "This will be merely the beginning. 'This is the liveliest program we have undertaken.' We want everybody to sit up and take notice, now, for the fun's commencing."

The purpose of the whole business, explained Noble Heins, is to gather funds to send Yassar's patrol and band, numbering about sixty nobles, to the Seattle exposition. Other things that the temple will do, too, of course, and the Atlanta delegation promises to be one of the finest there.

Sunday's moving picture show will be unique in one respect. Not only will every film be a "first-run" picture, but as each reel is displayed it becomes like a parade going over the dam. It will be shown again. A patron can sit in the theater from start to finish, all afternoon and evening, and he'll be seeing something new all the time. Contributions will be accepted at the door. Details of the program are being arranged now.

L. E. PRATT DELIVERS ADDRESS TO AD MEN

"Lighthouses of truth upon the high seas of complex modern business," is what Jewell E. Pratt, chairman of the educational committee of the Association of Advertisers, said in his address at the World, characterized the daily newspaper in an address Thursday afternoon before the Atlanta Ad Men's club at its luncheon meeting in the Hotel Winthrop.

"Every unprepared person must admit," said Mr. Pratt, "that the average advertiser is a high degree of responsibility to its readers and advertisers."

The greatest foil of today is constituted of people with weak dyspeptic stomachs who are artificial digesters. They are encouraged a lay or tired out stomach to suit its work by doing most of its work for it. Artificial digestion, artificial digesters soon lose their efficiency. Where one does the work three or four are now required and the poor old stomach itself is worn out that way.

Your stomach must be strong enough to expand and contract with a sort of chewing movement. If your stomach isn't strong enough to properly chew, it will not digest. It will right on having indigestion every day, until you make it strong.

There is one stomach remedy that every dyspeptic can depend on. It is the famous old Maccar's Stomach Tablets. Most stomach troubles are due to indigestion. Indigestion is a weak stomach, inflamed and inactive—sooner or later it will lead to ulcers, cancer, and other serious diseases. Maccar's Stomach Tablets are the only remedy that will cure indigestion, and they are so easy to take that even the most delicate can use them.

JAMES SEWELL FOUND GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Jury Convicts Him on Charge of Killing T. H. Goodman at Eal House July 1

James Sewell, on trial for the second time for the alleged murder of F. H. Goodman in the Eal hotel July 1, was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter by a jury in Judge Ben H. Hill's branch of the superior court late Wednesday afternoon.

Sewell was found guilty of the murder and sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Hill at his original trial. The months of his record in court took exceptions to Judge Hill's charge to the jury and granted Sewell another trial.

The possible sentence for voluntary manslaughter ranges from one to twenty years. Judge Hill reserved sentence Wednesday afternoon until Thursday or Friday. Edgar Latham, Paul Hartlett, and J. N. Moore are Sewell's attorneys.

WILL TAKE RELIGIOUS CENSUS OF ATLANTA

Pocket Testament League Will Also Be Organized During Revival

Two important features in connection with the Chapman-Alexander revival during the four weeks beginning February 14 will be the religious census of the city to be taken on the afternoon of February 14 and the organization of a Pocket Testament League, with an approximate membership of 25,000 persons in Atlanta.

It is planned to take the census in two hours. Workers from the various churches and Sunday schools and the many church societies will visit every home and office in Atlanta and make a record of the names, ages and religious affiliations of each member of the family. They will be armed to attend the evangelistic meetings and after the revival the records will be turned over to the various ministers so that the work begun at the meetings may be permanently continued.

The executive committee in charge of the revivals will place in the hands of each policeman and every motorman and conductor, a pocket testament containing the Gospel of St. John and some hymns, notably the great "Hallelujah" song. They will be asked to read a chapter of the testament each day and to always carry the book with them. There will later be a general distribution of thousands of these pocket testaments and records will be kept of all persons who affiliate themselves with the League.

THEATERS

Qua Edwards' "Matinee girls," headlining the Forsyth vaudeville bill this week, are meeting with success. Among the headline attractions are Adler and Arline in a surprise act; Sam Hearn and Helen Eley in a brisic song, rattle and dance number; Stuart, the Male Fetti, and a trained dog act.

Next week's bill looks promising. Emma Carus, the Broadway musical comedy star, assisted by Carl Handall, undoubtedly one of the very best dancers in the country, will top the bill.

Week after next Jesse L. Lasky's "The Beauties" will be the card.

Bayard Veiller's smashing melodrama of modern conditions in New York life, "Within the Law," will be again seen at the Atlanta theater on tonight, Friday and Saturday with a Saturday matinee. For an entire season of twelve months, the play packed the Eltinge theater in New York City, receiving the most extraordinary praise. Clara Joel will again be seen as Mary Turner.

The sensational photodrama "Born Again," with Miss Helen Boyette in the leading role, will be the attraction at the Grand Thursday afternoon and evening. It was shown for the first time in this city on Wednesday and Thursday at the Grand opera house, where it attracted large audiences. It is by far the best play in which this talented actress has yet appeared. Friday and Saturday will be "Paramount days" at the Grand, when the offering will be Edith Tullaferry in "Young Romance," an appealing love story, and a musical comedy, "The Playwright," William C. De Mille.

SUPPORT IS PLEDGED TO GREAT REVIVAL
Support of the coming Chapman-Alexander revival was pledged by members of the Baraca-Philanthropic union at their regular monthly meeting Wednesday night at the Second Baptist church. Members of the union will play a prominent part in securing 5,000 men in the Bible classes of Atlanta before the beginning of the revival.

S. A. AKERS GIVES BOND TO APPEAR FOR TRIAL

Fraudulent Use of Mail in Lumber Dealer Charged By Government

Simon A. Akers, who was recently indicted by the federal grand jury for fraudulent use of the mail in connection with lumber sales, gave bond in the federal court Thursday for his appearance later.

The government charged Akers formed a company known as the Atlanta Lumber & Coal Co., which was not a bona fide concern. It was charged he wrote to John Compton, W. E. Hooks, E. J. McLendon and the A. F. Windham Lumber company, all out of town concerns, and ordered lumber, which, on its arrival in Atlanta, he sold, keeping the proceeds.

J. L. Moore, a lawyer at 261 Law building, and F. O. Simpson, a negro, are under indictment in connection with the indictment of a pension check of $50 made payable by the government to Akers.

It is charged J. L. Moore endorsed the check, that a negro whose name is unknown placed cross marks over and under the endorsement, and that Simpson, Moore and Akers used the check for the purpose of obtaining money from the government. The check was cashed at a local bank.

Lee Hull, a negro who was recently indicted by the federal grand jury for having counterfeited money in his possession and six others who were indicted by the grand jury on Thursday and was sentenced to one year.

WINS COURT FIGHT FOR 391 PINTS OF WHISKY
Police Return Part of Quantity They Took From W. P. Hall

Three hundred and ninety-one pints of whisky were returned Wednesday by the Atlanta police to W. P. Hall, who sued out a possession warrant for the liquor against Chief Deavers, Newport Landford, chief of detectives.

The transfer was made in Judge Thomas division of the municipal court, following a hearing on the possession warrant. Chief Landford and Chief Deavers were present; City Attorney James L. Mayson represented the defense; Attorney C. C. Little represented the plaintiff.

Hall claimed 545 pints of whisky were taken from him by the police in a raid last July; later, after standing trial in the recorder's court, and after the police, drawing a fine of $200, he was released.

He said the police were willing to give it to him, but that it wasn't all there—over 100 pints were missing. He didn't allege where these pints went. Complications entered the case when Miss Ellen Bryant also claimed the whisky, saying it belonged to her but was in Hall's possession. So Hall sued for the possession warrant. Miss Bryant signed a disclaimer of her rights over the liquor, and Hall agreed to be satisfied with 391 instead of 545 pints. He took the large supply of whisky away from the court house in a wagon.

POLICEMAN ASSAULTED BY NEGROES BACK ON JOB
Luella West and Jennie Smith, the two negro women who caused the disturbance on Pratt street Wednesday afternoon in which Call Officer Tom Watson was injured, were fined $25 each by Recorder Johnson Thursday morning.

Though somewhat sore from his struggle with several negro men who attempted to rescue the women from the policeman, Watson reported for duty Thursday and proceeded the case before the recorder. None of the men has been caught.

COUNTIES URGED TO BUY HOME-GROWN SUPPLIES
To further provide a market for Georgia-raised foodstuffs the Georgia Chamber of Commerce is urging the county commissioners in every county in the state to purchase home-grown supplies for their communities. It is estimated that there are more than 5,000 counties being worked on the roads and at least 4,000 horses and mules.

It is pointed out that if this suggestion is followed $3,000 a day, or about $1,000,000 a year, can be diverted from the west into the pockets of Georgia farmers.

The Passing of a Pioneer.

There has passed in the death of Mr. Calvin Webb Huntcutt one of the most stalwart and engaging figures in Atlanta's remarkable history. Born eighty-seven years ago in Mecklenburg county, North Carolina, he journeyed to Georgia as a lad of eleven, and in company with his parents found lodging at Whitehall Inn, a wayside hotel on the site of what is now the foremost city of the Southeast. Settling with his family on a farm near Howell's ferry, the boy grew up in the sturdiness of country life and with the best traditions of a Southern freeman. At the same time, some miles away, a village was springing to the pretensions of a township, and thither the young farmer came, still in his teens.

From that day forward, save for short periods of residence in other parts of Georgia, and during his service to the Confederacy, Mr. Huntcutt was a citizen and a builder of Atlanta. He was a pioneer in the bravest and noblest sense of the word. His energy and talent, with all the fortune he earned him, were devoted to the community's advancement. It was in the hearts of men like him that what we call the Atlanta spirit dawned long years ago, and rose with splendor and quickening warmth. To his foresight and generous labor, and that of his comrades of old, are due very largely the achievement and the fame which Atlanta today enjoys.

For his workmanly patriotism, his steadfast service through eras of darkness and cheer alike, his integrity in business, his stanchness in friendship, his courage and strength in all that makes manhood worth while, Atlanta honors his life and ever will revere his memory.

Europe could hardly afford to go to war with us as long as we have the lending ability.

Where there is so much talk of prosperity there is bound to be at least some prosperity.

The Last Days of Pompeii as a spectacular will have to make way for the up-to-date war of 1914-15.

After a man gets on the shady side of life he regards his age and his bank balance as nobody's business but his own.

Bring This Mob to Justice.

The resolutions adopted by a mass meeting of the citizens of Monticello and Jasper county on the recent lynching in that community find earnest response in the mind of every Georgian who values his State's good name or who has any sense of justice and humanity. Savage lawlessness seldom grows so monstrous as it did in the mob which hanged four negro prisoners, two of them women, charged with running a "blind trip" and with assaulting the officers who came to arrest them. That was murder, cold-blooded and cowardly and so should it be dealt with, to the limit of the State's legal resources.

To the honor of Jasper county, its representative people condemn this crime and pledge themselves to do all within their power to bring the criminals duly to justice. At a call from the Mayor of Monticello, two hundred or more business men and farmers assembled at the county court house and adopted the resolutions referred to. Reinforcing their action, comes a letter to the Governor from the sheriff, who likewise denounces the mob and urges that a reward for the arrest and conviction of its members be offered. Further, the solicitor general and the judge of the circuit are investigating the case, and doubtless will take such measures as their duty requires.

These facts are worth the common country's notice, for they witness Georgia's prevailing sentiment. In every State there are thugs and anarchists, but in no State is the true citizen more earnest in condemning mob brutality. That is the thought of this Commonwealth, the thought that now should be pronounced to unflinching consequence in punishing a peculiarly outrageous crime.

As hypocrite is a man who acts differently when he knows some one is watching him.

Coie Hisee is reported to have literary aspirations. They were doubtless wished on him by some of his political enemies.

Nature will probably have something to say about the size of the 1915 cotton crop. As a rule she discourages two big harvests in succession.

Down in Mexico there is a proposal to the various presidents to stop fighting long enough to consider peace. Maybe the movement will become contagious.

The Cornerstone of Oglethorpe.

January the twenty-first, 1915, is a day worthy to be set in the high tide of Atlanta's calendar, for it marks the refunding of Oglethorpe University and gives local habitation to a splendid ideal. The cornerstone laid this day is a milestone in the South's upward march. It points forward to widening achievement and opportunity, and it points backward to cherished traditions.

What a gracious part the old Oglethorpe played in the antebellum life of the South! What memories cling to the institution that rose at Midway and became the fostering mother of statesmen and scholars and poets, among them Sidney Lanier! Of the Oglethorpe university that is reborn today may be said what Wordsworth wrote of the human soul—

Not in entire forgetfulness, nor in after pactness,
But trailing clouds of glory, does it come.

Its great mission has begun anew; may it speed and prosper through all the years to come.

The man who does things can afford to let his wife do all the talking.

As the twig is bent the small boy is inclined to make a quick disappearance.

Do What?

If evils could be remedied as briskly as they are expost, this would be a far better, though much less interesting, planet. The Mexican hubbub wears on, apparently as hopeless as ever—a scramble of swart adventurers for booty or ambition. The forces of freedom, once united against a corrupt Dictatorship, have split into snarling clans; the dogs of war have turned to fice; what aspired to be a glorious revolution has lapsed into petty anarchy. All this is very lamentable for Mexico and very annoying, at times painfully so, to the United States; wherefore, the learned Senator Lodge, the bustling Mr. Mann, and the turgid Colonel Roosevelt, together with odds and ends of jingoistic persons throughout the country, insist that our Government do something.

Do what? There's the rub. It is easy to pick flaws in the Administration's Mexican policy, but of who of the critics has pointed out a wiser course than that pursued? Between watchful waiting and forceful intervention, most Americans certainly prefer the former. If the Mexicans cannot or will not settle their difference except by fighting them out, the United States, regretting the situation as it may, had better let them fight one another than drive them to a transient truce for fighting us. The Philadelphia Public Ledger, a stanch Republican in politics, frankly declares on this issue:

"Granted that the policy of the Government is a failure, who will produce an alternative policy under guarantee of success? Granted that the people will not stand for a reign of anarchy across the border, how shall we stop it? The moment we meddle with the situation all the disunited and fractious factions of Mexico will issue into a solid army of opposition against us. Then, from four to ten years of guerrilla warfare, a hundred thousand American graves beyond the Rio Grande, a national debt of $1,000,000,000 and another big pension budget for half a century to come! Finally, Mexico would be subdued. And then what would we do with it? We do not need it, we do not want it. Annexation would be more obnoxious than the present reign of anarchy. A suzerainty is possible, but if we accept Mexico as a ward it must be for a period sufficiently long for us to educate the people, develop a capacity for self-government and transform the very constitution of the Latin-Indian nature."

From four to ten years of guerrilla warfare, thousands of American graves beyond the Rio Grande, a national debt of a billion dollars—these are things better than watchful waiting? Are they better either for Mexico or for the United States? If not, it would be more sensible in the Administration's critics to leave the Mexican problem a while and devote their energies to improving the weather.

Japan's idea of war seems to be to remain in the background.

It sometimes costs more to neglect a duty than it does to perform it.

Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies.

ON LEARNING

(From the hitherto unpublished letters of Thomas Wentworth Higginson.)

My Dear Rokeby: It is not such an awesome thing to be learned. Perhaps you have listened to a brilliant lecturer in a seminar or even in a well attended audience hall. At the close of the hour you went away oppressed by feeling that you had been overwhelmed in an avalanche of cut diamonds. Much learning had made the professor mad, you fancied, and how sadly were you yourself bewitched. But have you not yet discovered how easy it is, if the god is in you (enthusiasm) and you have freshly filled your mind with your subject, to do the same thing yourself? Mind you never lost yourself in eagerness over your theme before a sympathetic audience—especially one that you knew knew less than you. Ignore that fact. But a perfect aspect of words would draw my self-consciousness and soothe the usually active minds of my students like a benediction. Mentis hominum mirabilis! Suggestion seems to be the procursal of most if not all the provinces of the mind. But Rokeby, touch your own mind. The course of a lineal descendant of Prometheus. Scyllism will carry one only just so far. . . . By the by, Rokeby, should you be looking for an example of a student's imaginative soul must grasp its teeth in impotence over the guileless but prostrating comments of mediocrity in the presence of art, ask our friend the Editor of Calamus what you question is most frequently asked about the etchings in his fine collection, as the bumpkins pass in and out before those poetic portrayals of movement and song. With gum chewing assurance and hopeless parallels one in three will ask, as he stands before a wisp of cloud, a twisted tree, or a sunset, "What is that?" "Where was that taken at, sir?" Calamus was so distraught when I saw him last that I was minded to invite him to Strohbecker for a week's shooting.—Chicago Tribune.

Our American folk songs, the Stephen Foster plantation melodies, have recently been under the ban in Brazil because of their "colored" vulgarity. In order that they may not be entirely lost to our cultured friends Bostonized versions have been made of two of the best known of these classics.

FITTING THE BLIND FOR SELF SUPPORT

BY FREDERICK J. HARKIN.

ONE of the most practical philanthropies now being developed is that of preparing the adult blind for financial independence. The school for the blind has been, chiefly for the education of the children. The blind adult received little attention. Until within a few years past it was tacitly understood that blind persons of mature age were a public charge, unable to do any work of real value to the community and therefore incapable of becoming self-supporting in their own homes. This view of the matter has been held by those who are most in touch with the work being done by the blind. It has been practically disproved by the success of the blind in their own homes, which blind persons are not only completely self-supporting, but are able to materially contribute to the support of others.

Since fully three-fourths of the blind persons in this country lose their sight after school age, the problem of providing them with employment is more complex than is that of dealing with those who have been blind from infancy and have therefore been educated with reference to their physical lack. Yet plans by which the adult blind shall be made self-supporting are being so well perfected in many places that large numbers of blind men and women are taking their place industrially, side by side with seeing workers.

The Massachusetts commission for the blind has divided its adult charges into two classes, those who have lost their sight from accident and those who have fallen during the industrial period. It would seem that the latter class feel their loss more than those who have never had sight, but they have made the most of the advantage of ordinary school training and also the training of the years in which they worked. Their greatest hardship seems to come from the realization that they are no longer of use to the community. If this can be prevented their keenest suffering is overcome. A man under the observation of the Massachusetts commission was an excellent example. He had lost his sight at the age of twenty-seven years. He was idle for seven years, his courage as well as his vision failing. He then secured him a position as a janitor of a building, and for five years he has been doing the work of a seeing man. He has been able to make a considerable modification of his old work. He has been able to adapt himself to the difference in methods found upon him by the loss of sight.

The old way of providing for blind people is to place them in institutions in which certain restricted industries were given them under conditions which differentiated them in every way from people with normal vision. The modern method recognizes the limitations of the blind, but believes that the blind can be practically kept by keeping him with seeing people and providing him with employment in which his disability will not prove too serious a handicap in industrial competition. It is frequently found that the lowered sense of sight gives added keenness in some of the other senses, especially in touch and hearing.

The Massachusetts commission maintains a number of industrial shops in the towns exclusively for the employment of blind adults. If the policy of the commission whenever feasible to have the men board in the families of seeing workers and to use as nearly normal living conditions as possible, the plan is meeting its objective of its practical value. Instead of being housed with others equally unfortunate, the blind man learns to live as a normal person, with a constant association with seeing persons. He is paid regular wages, which in most cases render him fully self-supporting, so that he is not humiliated by any sense of dependence.

The same plan is being worked out in a number of other states. In Pennsylvania the sum of $18,457.21 was paid out last year for work performed by blind persons at regular wage rates. This money was earned by shop work which the blind men performed in the commission's own shops and in a little miscellaneous employment. A great impetus in the work of making the adult blind men in Pennsylvania self-supporting is due to the personal efforts of Lafford Dalmon, of Philadelphia. He has been able to overcome his own handicap, but to help hundreds of other blind men to independence. He has been able to make a considerable modification of his old work. He has been able to adapt himself to the difference in methods found upon him by the loss of sight, so that he is not humiliated by any sense of dependence.

Under Mr. Dalmon's suggestion and instruction a number of blind men in that state have become efficient salesmen, not peddling from door to door some small article, but selling by appointment in the homes of the poor blind" appeal made to her, but active, efficient salesmen traveling upon the road in equal competition with the seeing commercial traveler.

DAY AND NIGHT

Why not slide the day's program back about five hours?

This suggestion is based upon the superior life value of the early morning hours. The world can do more and better work from 5 to 12 in the morning than from 5 in the afternoon to midnight.

Eight, eight, eight is now the wholesome gas-light fun.

You cannot find anybody with whom to do business until 10 o'clock or so in the downtown offices, as they are today. Let us get down to work at 7 a. m. and quit for the day at noon or 1 p. m.

Let us have the afternoon concerts and parties in the afternoon instead of at night.

When dark comes let us go to bed.

7 is a most auspicious hour, however. Hence most to be desired. The impossible is always more fascinating than the possible.

How did we come to sleep all morning and sit up all night?

Ohio has the distinction of being one of the first states to appropriate public money in a vigorous campaign for the employment of blind persons. Through its state commission for the blind it employs teachers to go to the homes of the blind and instruct them in some of the work by which they can become self-supporting. It also provides a market for their work. Representatives of the commission visit shops and study the work done there with a view to finding occasions of demand for the products of the blind. With the co-operation of the employers blind men are then installed and with a little instruction are able to earn a comfortable living. The commission also works with the blind in their own homes can learn to use the sewing machine as well as to sew by hand, to knit, to make brooms and other products, and they are sold in the leading department stores throughout the state. These stores handle the goods without commission.

The Ohio commission of the blind has a regular organization for providing the material for home work, giving instruction in how to do it, and selling the products at prices which afford a fair remuneration to the worker.

The industries suited to the blind adult worker are more varied than has been supposed. The old employment of braiding and chair caning for men and knitting and crocheting for women have been greatly broadened. The blind-workshop products include many things such as furniture, side sets, sewing baskets, burlap sacks, paper bags and clothing, while looms operated by the blind are making rugs, art fabrics of various kinds and excellent grades of toweling.

Blind typewriters, under certain conditions, can render efficient service in the office. A number of stenographers who can carry on their work without eyesight is increasing each year, while recently a telephone company in Ohio has taken a number of blind girls who are likely to become excellent switchboard operators. Blind women can learn to do all kinds of housework and make excellent cooks. Trained nursing is also being taught to blind women. Recently a savings bank has been added to the industries being taught in several of the institutions for the blind. Piano tuning is an industry which is being taught successfully to a considerable number of blind adults. In Pennsylvania several blind piano tuners now established themselves independently by securing clients who give them regular engagements. Other blind tuners are employed by regular music houses and are doing satisfactory work. The thesis that all blind people have musical talent is as erroneous as that all men make good soldiers, an exceptionally high number of these afflicted persons are being trained in the music of a school for the blind has lately been provided with a pipe organ, costing $5,000, upon which it is expected that the blind men will take in the future. A number of the most distinguished organists of this country have been blind, among them J. W. Aldrich, of Washington, and the late David D. Wood, of Philadelphia, who had a world-wide reputation for his interpretations of Bach, as well as for his original compositions.

Despite their handicaps, blind men and women have distinguished themselves in several of the learned professions. The congress of the United States has a senator and a representative now in office who are blind. In Minnesota, the late Frank C. Johnson, a member from Minnesota, is also a blind man. The house opens its sessions each day with a prayer by a blind chaplain.

The federal government of the United States does little for the blind citizens as a whole, but more than does that of any other civilized nation. It does not as yet even maintain a federal bureau for the blind, although such a bureau has been recommended by a commission and bills for its establishment have been presented to congress. At present the United States provides a subsidy of $10,000 annually to the American Printing House for the blind, located in St. Louis, with the understanding that the products of this establishment are to be divided among the different institutions for the blind in the United States. The government also pays the salary of the librarian for the blind in the Library of Congress, but makes no special provision for the blind in the purchase of books for that library. These are still being purchased out of the general fund and are meager in supply in proportion to the demand for them. The library for the blind, the Library of Congress are sent to every state in the union, the only restriction being that they go to localities where there is no library providing such books. Most of the states provide books for the blind, although not in large numbers, and few large city libraries are without a reading room for the blind. In addition to supplying books most of these libraries give instruction to adult blind who in most cases have lost their sight after maturity.

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1914, by Frank Crane.)

Why have we reversed nature and artificialized our social structure? And why have we made it so common, bourgeois and undistinguished to get up with the sun, and upper-tensish and hilarious to get up with the moon?

Think also of economy! How many oodles of dollars we squander in electricity, gas and kerosene, so that we may have the artificial light, when the Creator gives us for nothing an infinitely better light.

What a twisted old world it is! Let's you and me go right to it.

But some man will say, how?

It is the simplest thing imaginable. We will call a meeting, the meeting we will draft resolutions, then we will appoint a committee.

Then we will appoint a committee of prominent people as an advisory board.

Then we will take up a collection.

That's all. Then we can go home and think how easy reform is, after all.

TRAVELETTE, 132--SMYRNA

Smyrna is cosmopolitan raised to the sixth power, and you sense the fact before ever you set foot in the city. The harbor itself is crowded with the ships of all nations, for Smyrna is one of the best ports of the Ottoman empire. The quay is bordered with substantial buildings of the most European aspect, beyond them rise the white domes of the mosques and the dark cupresses of Turkish cemeteries; the pointed spires of Christian churches; and the rounded roofs of synagogues. Above them all towers St. Pagan crowned by the picturesque ruin of a great castle which was his before the city was built, which typifies none of the warning human elements of modern Smyrna, but stands as a lonely monument to the city's wonderful past.

Before history began, and is one of the numerous places that have been claimed as the birthplace of Homer.

All the various races and nationalities that inhabit Smyrna are neatly separated into quarters. The Greek quarter is the largest and finest, and constitutes more than half of the population, and are the most influential citizens. The modern Greek is a splendid business man, and in Smyrna they also have nearly a monopoly of the professions.

Slightly less than a quarter of the population is made up of the Armenian quarter. The Armenian quarter is straight and wide streets are original streets. The weather Armenians have discarded all of their old costume and wear the European style, but the poorer classes still affect baggy trousers and turbans which are much cheaper and less expensive.

The Armenian quarter is next in size and importance, and the Jewish quarter the smallest and most crowded.

Upon the streets, all of these various peoples mingle in an inconceivably motley crowd, which is still further varied by the constant presence of English, French and Americans. The English have Smyrna railways which have made her modern commercial prosperity, and French companies built the quays, while the Americans have established their business there also in the world, to satisfy their curiosity and get rid of their money.

One of the most characteristic features of the city of Smyrna, for during the summer months, the city may see French plays, Italian operas and Greek comedies, and if you desire a spiced of the Orient, also see the dancing girls in the Turkish quarter.

Fire is one of the most important products of the city, and the methods of curing them are kept strictly secret. Large quantities of leather, such as Austria, France and Italy. Soap is extensively manufactured, and it seems to be restricted to the upper classes. Nearly all of the industry is carried on in products of which the average American has never heard. Chrome, antimony and liquorice root are regular exports, and is about the only staple manufactured there.

GRAIN MARKET OPINIONS

Barlett, Framer & Co.: Do not look for a permanent recession in wheat. Strongly advise purchases of corn on all little weak spots. Can see no basis for bullish feeling in oats.

Finley, Berrel & Co.: Advise purchases of corn on all weak spots. Look for high prices of May and July corn. Favor long side of oats.

Do not see any basis for a recovery in prices of corn. Bros.: Wheat, corn and oats are higher.

PREVENTION
CURE

That the management and stockholders want to know definitely, not only what the business has produced, but that the statement is correct.

When trouble comes the accountant's services are first in demand.

Why not beforehand, as a prevention instead of a cure?

The new building, which is on a side street near Chapel, said that he had been told by one of the White-

several parcels around him had changed

There have also been several surveys in that section. The North Georgia Mineral railroad, which is supposed to be making for the town, has already acquired a right of way from Carle-ville to the A. K. & N. bell

Recent development on the west side of the state house, and would besides give supposition that the railroad wants a direct connection to the Terminal sta-

This would make it independent of the state house, and would besides give it a much more direct route into the city.

RENTING STATUS.

The status of the renting business last year has an important bearing on real estate, and in this connection a few facts are worth noting as being significant.

The agency reports that up to about two weeks ago it had more vacancies than houses rented to the extent that houses rented have caught up with the agency's stock of houses, and the reported exodus.

The condition of the agency that the renting situation was seen its worst, and that from now on would be noted. Undoubtedly the employment situation is better and the rents will be higher than they were some time back.
